Quick Response Prevents Tragedy

In 2006, PAW saved Scarlett and Rhett when their days were numbered at the animal shelter. Like their namesakes, Scarlett was a beautiful charmer, and Rhett was a very handsome fellow. The Labrador retriever mixes loved people but also were very bonded to each other. PAW was delighted when the McAllister family adopted them both!

Last year, on Valentine's Day, the McAllister's almost lost their beloved Scarlett. Brian McAllister shares the experience to emphasize the importance of responding quickly to any indication of sudden medical distress in a pet.

Around dinner time, Scarlett walked out to the back porch and laid down. She started making sounds as if she was going to throw up. My daughter Katie let her outside, but continued to watch her. After a couple of minutes, Katie told me she was worried about Scarlett—she wouldn't come to her and she wasn't listening. I looked out back and saw Scarlett wandering around aimlessly, trying to throw up. I watched as she laid down on her side on the cold ground and put her head down.

I went outside to check on her. She had thrown up, and she was very distant and unresponsive. This poor girl went from completely normal to very sick in 20 minutes and I immediately suspected poisoning. I yelled for my wife and daughter, and we loaded Scarlett and Rhett into the car. Although he appeared normal, I wanted Rhett with us just in case he was poisoned and taking longer to show signs or symptoms.

In 15 minutes, we arrived at the Beltway Emergency Animal Hospital. The doctor said Scarlett's condition was critical. Blood work and X-rays ruled out pancreatitis, so he suspected E. coli or poisoning. Scarlett's condition worsened and she began to defecate and throw up blood. The doctor was wonderful—very attentive, decisive, and thorough. He put her on an IV to rush fluids and antibiotics into her, along with Vitamin K, which I learned was the antidote for rat poisoning.

We had never had rats or rodents or used any type of pesticide or rat poison in the yard. The doctor asked us to check the yard when we got home to make sure it was free of any types of hazards.

My daughter Lisa walked the yard and discovered a dead animal. We couldn't figure out if it was a rat or a squirrel—its rear legs and tail were missing—but I suspect this was our culprit. We cleaned it up and inspected the rest of the yard and found it to be clear of other hazards.

Scarlett stayed overnight at the emergency hospital, and we were told she was responding well to the medicine. She spent the next night at our regular animal hospital, Beltsville Veterinary Hospital. When we brought her home the next day, she was low key and low energy. Rhett was wonderful. Dogs must sense when other dogs aren't feeling well. He did not try to wrestle or tackle her in play.

I can only guess that the animal in our yard was poisoned elsewhere and crawled to our yard where it eventually died. We don't know if Scarlett ingested rat poison from the animal or if she suffered the effects of E. coli or some other bacterial infection from the dead, decaying animal.

What I do know though is this: had it not been for the keen observations of my daughter Katie and our quick action in this matter, we would have lost Scarlett. I have never seen anything or anyone go from healthy to critically sick in such a short amount of time. In these types of cases, time is critical. 🐾

PAW at Bethesda's Strut your Mutt!

PAW volunteers participate in numerous events and festivities all year long, educating the public about our rescue work. At one event, Strut Your Mutt, volunteers greeted visitors to our booth and showed off our beautiful dogs available for adoption.

Happy Endings

One of the best parts of being a PAW volunteer is helping our animals find their forever homes. We recently asked some adopters of our furry friends for updates on how they're doing. Here are a few of the stories we received.

Luke

Luke is a big boy who came to PAW with some behavioral issues. See how far he's come with the love and patience of his dedicated family.

Late last year, my family decided it was time for us to open our home to another dog, after losing our 14-year-old Tervuren to cancer a year earlier. We saw Luke at a PAW adoption event and fell for him right away. They told us most people were looking for puppies and not a 4-year-old dog, but we wanted an older fellow. Luke had a few issues with some other dogs and an unsettled stomach, but he came to live with us anyway. I'm happy to say that within a couple of months on a good quality dog food we no longer need to light scented candles!

On our walks, watching his reaction to swinging "For Sale" signs and fluttering cloth, as well as his aversion to deep-voiced men, we concluded Luke wasn't well treated in his previous home. He didn't even understand what a belly rub was! He now thinks he's landed in the lap of luxury and initiates belly rubs of his own accord. He has a soft doggie bed but prefers the sofa for naps and loves to be with us wherever we are.

Luke and I have taken a class to help us learn to manage his behavior around other dogs and retrain him to realize that they are a GOOD thing. He's so intelligent that training has been an incredible experience for me. He comes to tell me when he wants to work, reminding me of the time, and offering his tricks before I can get the clicker and treats in hand. He's got so much love to give that I'm grateful to PAW for giving him the chance to find us. We had to work for each other, but how rewarding!

—Theresa

Editor's note: The "reactive dog" class that Luke benefited from is offered by the non-profit Your Dog's Friend at www.yourdogsfriend.info.

Molly

After her original owner died, Molly was taken to the shelter and later found her way to PAW. This sweet girl was soon adopted and is settling in nicely with her new family.

We can't remember life without Molly! She is wonderful! Jacob says she's the best dog ever. She is figuring out how each of us would like her to behave and adjusts her actions depending on who she's around. She is much more gentle with Jacob and they are learning how to interact.

Molly and her boys

Jay or I take her to the dog park at least 5 days a week. She loves playing with the other dogs and is usually exhausted by the time she leaves. We're still working on the stairs. They really scare her but we are making progress. A few more weeks and she'll be a pro.

She's sitting right next to me as I write this. I asked her if she has any complaints and she didn't say anything. I told her I was sending you a message and she licked my face. So I guess she's sending you kisses.

Anyway, we love her and she seems content. Thank you so much for giving us the gift of being her family.

—Chandra

Chase

Chase came to PAW with severe skin allergies. His adoptive family is lovingly caring for him, working diligently to keep his dozen or so environmental allergies in check (he's even allergic to trees!), and his adopted family is faithfully giving him allergy injections every 3 weeks.

Chase is on his regular shot now after having "ramped up" to this dosage over a few months. He doesn't mind getting a shot at all, which is amazing. His hot spots are all gone, even the one on his tail, which was where his main hot spot was for a long time. Chase very much enjoys laying on the deck, head resting between the railing bars and feet hanging off under the bottom railing bar. He also enjoys sleeping on the landing on the stairs to the basement (cool, but not too far away from the action). He listens very well and has been a really good dog. Over the summer with the heat outside, he was not too enthusiastic about chasing the ball, but he's starting to resume this activity now that the weather is cooler.

—Lorraine

Kirby and Jordi

The Sullivans adopted Jordi (formerly Marcus) and went back to PAW a week later to adopt his brother Kirby. The boys were rescued from a hoarding situation. Jordi always had a beautiful coat but Kirby was evidently not getting proper nutrition. Check out his before and after photos and this note from his new family:

Jordi and Kirby are the sweetest, most personable Chow Chows ever and we can't imagine our home without them. There's so much love in those boys and we are the lucky recipients of it! Jordi will offer his paw (sometimes both of them) and "hold hands" with us for as long as we want and he always has kisses for us. Kirby is our sweet rascal boy; he acts like an independent little guy who doesn't need anybody, but when we fawn over him, he rolls over and basks in it.

Finding these boys had to be fate. We weren't looking for any more dogs to join our family; Kelsey (the boys' "little sister") was enough--or so we thought. I'll forever be grateful to our daughter for looking on the PAW website at just the right time. I took one look at Jordi's beautiful face and that was that--within two weeks he was home with us. One week later Kirby had joined the family and the brothers were together again. Thank you PAW—for making our family complete!

—The Sullivans

Duncan

Duncan

A PAW volunteer found two dogs on a busy road. One had evidently been hit by a car and was killed, the other (Duncan, formerly Buddy) was sitting beside his dog friend, guarding his body. Buddy was emaciated when PAW got him, but now he is a healthy weight and happy in his forever home. He recently sent us an update.

Things have been going well at my new home. I don't seem to be barking much while Ty and Jenn are away at work anymore, haven't had an accident in the house in almost a month, and I'm settling in well. Ty and Jenn take me for long walks and play with me and give me lots of love. It tires me out sometimes but only for a little bit, then I'm up and ready for more.

Jenn's boss had a dinner out at his home in Olney a few weeks back, dogs invited, and he had a big fenced in backyard so I was able to run around and there were other dogs to play with, it was so much fun, and I slept most of the next day (though I did make sure to get Ty and Jenn up at 6 a.m. for my regular feeding before continuing to doze). Ty and Jenn say that I get to go to doggie summer camp at the All Dogs Club, I should have lots of fun and get to play with a bunch of other dogs. Thanks for everything.

—Duncan

Beija

When Beija came to PAW, she had a heartworm infection. Beija was a real doll, and it didn't take long to find her a wonderful home. Here's what her new family tells us about how she is doing now.

Rather than talking about "happy endings,” I’d prefer to think of it as a “happy life” (ongoing) for Beija. She appears to have many good years ahead of her. . .

Beija (formerly Beatrice) is an eager companion on walks and runs, which we do daily. She still loves to hide her chew bones in piles of clothes or the cracks in the couch. She has settled down and lost her quivering nervousness which was predominant for the first few months after we adopted her. Now, she is very quiet and calm most of the time. She hardly ever barks, but she can get our attention when she wants it by gently whining and putting her paws up on us. We suspect she is hard-of-hearing because she doesn’t react or come when she is called. If she isn’t looking in our direction, she will only turn around when she hears a sharp clap or loud noise.

She’s “passed” a thorough heart evaluation in 2008 and subsequently was able to have some minor surgery and major dental work done. All her regular medical care is still done by College Park Animal Hospital.

We are very satisfied with our adoption. Thank you to PAW and especially to you, Wendy [Beija’s former foster mom], for all your support and encouragement!

—Kay 🐾

Could YOU have a happy ending in your future?

Plenty of PAW dogs and cats (and even bunnies!) are still looking for their forever homes. Come meet our animals at an adoption show or check them out on our website (paw-rescue.org). Here are two of their stories.

Blair came to PAW in September 2007, yet another unclaimed shelter stray, but she’s anything but ordinary. Her foster mom doesn’t have enough fingers and toes to count the times that she has been stopped on the street by those who wanted to admire this lovely lady. She brings smiles to people’s faces. Blair is downright beautiful with her unusual markings. In addition to looks, Blair is smart, endearing and a loyal companion. Blair has some special needs that you can read about on the PAW adoptable dogs page.

Romeo, a beautiful 1-year-old gray tabby cat, came to PAW with a severe infection in both eyes. Despite his pain and limited vision, little Romeo was sweet and loving, and enjoyed being petted. Surgery gave Romeo back his sight, but the trauma of an operation followed by twice daily eye drops for more than a month made the once affectionate cat fearful of people.

Romeo’s foster family is now patiently working to regain Romeo’s trust. While he loves being near people, Romeo continues to shy away from being petted or held. We know it’s just a matter of time for him to feel comfortable enough to be affectionate again, and we’re sure Romeo will blossom once he’s in a forever home with a patient and loving owner. This young boy has permanent scars on his eyes, but they neither detract from his beauty nor stop him from playing joyfully with the other cats and small dog in his foster home. 🐾

More PAW dogs and cats waiting to meet you!
